

Hello,

Freedom Summer Collegiate is looking for doctoral students to design and teach advanced 4-week courses to high school students this June in Mississippi and Arkansas. We're hoping that graduate students from your program will apply for this opportunity that will allow them to:

- Design and lead a 4-week course on a topic in their area of expertise.
- Enjoy a summer teaching high school students in rural Mississippi or Arkansas.
- Develop as a teacher through this teaching experience, our coaching, and collaboration with other graduate students.
- Earn a stipend for their work, with housing provided.

Could you please pass this information along to doctoral students in your department?

Past participants of our program from Harvard, MIT, Howard, Duke, University of California, Rutgers, and other universities have taught courses like Artificial Intelligence, Persist to Resist: Black Women & Resistance in the African Diaspora, Music & Politics, Workers Rebellion, and The New World.

And please encourage them to check out our website, www.freedomsummercollegiate.org, our facebook page, & our twitter feed. For questions, please reach out to Andy Donnelly, the director of the program, at andy@freedomsummercollegiate.org.

Thank you,
Andy
