The deadline for applications is 31 May 2017

The Economics of the Middle East Research Group of Philipps-Universität Marburg in cooperation with the Faculty of Social Sciences of University of Tehran, Tarbiat Modares University and Ferdowsi University of Mashhad is pleased to invite applicants for the 2017 Autumn School, which will be hosted by University of Tehran.

We are seeking highly motivated students (Advanced Bachelor, Master, Ph.D.), with interest in the MENA region, from above mentioned four universities in the fields of economics, sociology and other related disciplines to join us in the upcoming autumn in Tehran.

The Autumn School is a one-week academic programme, which is supported by German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) within the “Higher Education Dialogue with the Muslim World” programme. This academic programme will provide a great opportunity to expand knowledge on social policies in oil-based economies with experts from Germany and Iran.

Selected participants from Philipps-Universität Marburg will receive a flat-rate travel allowance for economy airline tickets and accommodation according to the DAAD guidelines.

Applicants must submit the following documents in English to Mr. Sven Fischer (narem@uni-marburg.de, subject line: Application for Tehran Autumn School 2017):

- A motivation letter (max. two pages) in English, which includes the reasons why you would like to participate.
- A CV in English (including transcript of records, skills, and main achievements).
- Contact details of two academic references.
- Evidence of proficiency in English language (strongly recommended, but not compulsory).
