

Hebrew Language Fellow job announcement:

Vassar College is seeking a Hebrew Language Fellow, a recently post-University native speaker to work with our Hebrew Language students and our Professor of Hebrew.

The candidate should be a lively person who works well with others, who is comfortable in a highly diverse environment and who loves— and wants to transmit a love of— the Hebrew language and Hebrew language culture.

There are Language Fellows in each of the languages at Vassar and they form a friendly and cohesive community on campus. They work approximately 12 hours/week for a stipend of $500 per month. They are expected to live on campus where they receive room and board, health insurance and can also take up to two classes per semester at the College. The College also covers their transportation to and from Vassar from wherever they are based at the beginning and the end of the academic year.

Each of our previous Language Fellows has been tasked by the instructor then teaching Hebrew to do slightly different things. Some have them have taught a section of language drill; some have them have lead a conversation hour; some have helped organize departmental/ program events and social activities; some have supported Hebrew courses through guest teaching (for instance, teaching a small unit during the regularly scheduled class, under the supervision and with the mentoring of the regular instructor), or help out with tutoring.

In all cases, however, the language fellow is closely supervised and mentored by the language instructor. It can be a really nice collaboration, and really helpful for both students and the instructor.

Please ask interested parties to submit the following documents:

- cover letter
- CV
- academic transcript
- statement of interest
- two letters of recommendation

DEADLINE March 15 2019

The Language Fellow will be expected to arrive at Vassar during the last week in August and remain in residence through the beginning of May per the Vassar College Academic Calendar. The Fellow is free of responsibilities during Fall, Thanksgiving, Winter and Spring breaks.
