Position overview:

The Centre for Arab and Islamic Studies (The Middle East and Central Asia) wishes to appoint one academic staff with expertise in the field of Turkish language, culture and modern history.

The appointee to this position will teach Turkish language, initially at introductory and intermediate levels, and offer related courses in Turkish culture, history and politics. He/she may also be required to offer tailored courses as required by various organisations in the public and private sectors, and to make a substantial contribution to the research and teaching in the field of her/his expertise at national and international levels.

The Centre for Arab & Islamic Studies (The Middle East and Central Asia) offers undergraduate and graduate courses in various aspects of the politics, history, culture, political economy, international relations and languages of the Muslim Middle East and Central Asia, and the role of Islam in these regions, as well as supervision for PhD and MA students.

The ANU College of Arts and Social Sciences (CASS) is one of seven Colleges at ANU. The College, which is structured into two main research schools, offers degrees in more than 20 discipline areas and excels in research across the creative arts, humanities and social sciences. The College has a substantial international research presence and is a major source of national policy advice. Our academic staff are internationally recognised for their research, and 57 are members of the Australian Academy of the Humanities, the Academy of the Social Sciences of Australia, or both. We also host 13 Australian Research Council Future Fellows and three ARC Laureates. A hub of vibrant activity, we host more than 270 lectures, concerts and exhibitions each year, most of which are open to the public. Our students, staff and graduates come from more than 60 nations, bringing a diversity of perspective to campus life.
